

audiotransparent

Biography

audiotransparent (from the Netherlands) combine indie songs with post rock spheres and play the result very very slowly. Although the songs may seem sorrowful and melancholy, a glimpse of hope always manages to shine through.

The first self titled long player released in 2003 found its way quickly into the dutch underground but also emerged on the BBC where John Peel played their record. Appreciation was found in those who like Low, Sigur Rós and Sparklehorse and the band played concerts supporting Byen, Tindersticks and Iron & Wine. Tindersticks were surprised by this young new band and asked audiotransparent to support them on their dutch shows. The five piece band from Groningen hooked up with producer El Corno again from which the results will be known mid september when the second lp is released on livingroomrecords.
